

The Josh Award 2016 – Application Form

Please include full name, address, telephone and mobile number and email address.

Please include brief biographical details (including what/where/when/duration) of your science engagement/communication career so far (maximum 300 words).

1. Please tell us about your defining moment, which could be a game changing project, piece of work, way of working or a key moment of change, creativity, innovation or passion. Please share one photograph or video to illustrate this (maximum 500 words).
2. Tell us how this moment has transformed your own science communication practice and how the wider field could learn from your experience (maximum 500 words).
3. Please explain how this defining moment either has or could inspire other people who communicate science or change the landscape of science communication? (maximum 300 words)
4. Which audiences have you engaged through your work? Please include any information regarding attempts to engage hard to reach audiences. Please also mention how you have found/identified your audience (maximum 500 words).
5. Please demonstrate what impact your activities have had on your audiences. Please make sure you include evidence of this impact (for example direct quotes, evaluation findings, teacher feedback etc.) Please share one photograph or video to bring this to life (maximum 500 words).
6. As Science Communicator in Residence for Manchester Science Festival you will be expected to create a novel project or event that connects with the Festival's attitude and ethos. Manchester Science Festival will support the event up to £1000. Please tell us about your idea for an event or project at Manchester Science Festival 2015. Please think about your audience, how you will make this as creative and participatory as possible, how you would develop the activity (including a planning timeline), its legacy and how you will measure its impact. We are particularly interested in projects that work with harder to reach audiences. Finally please tell us how these activities fit in with your future career vision.

Please email your information to msf@msimanchester.org.uk by midday on 15th April 2016.
